

No Time to Think

EBS not relevant

Considerations for an Underwater Escape System

- Danger of a compressed gas tank exploding is extremely low
- Any system that allows a person to breathe at a depth greater than 3 feet sea water has a risk of arterial gas embolism
- Most people do NOT think clearly in an emergency situation, but they will follow training
- Emergency equipment must be as simple as possible to use

